

KILGORE OPENS PRACTICE IN AUSTIN

In May, we announced the opening of Kilgore's Austin practice. We extended into the Austin business community to expand the niche market we serve: our practice of strategic legal services for executives, investors and inventors.

We already advised a corporate client on the hiring of an executive from a competitor. Also, we represented a CEO in his transition from an Austin software company.

He had this to say about our practice:

"Kilgore provided a high level of service to help me navigate a complex set of legal and personal issues with an employer. In today's business environment and challenging economy, where executive changes are the norm, a partner such as Kilgore helps balance the right level of risk a top executive should tolerate. I would highly recommend Ted Anderson, Robert Behrendt and their firm."

Kilgore also successfully represented an Austin executive in recovering his investment in a high performance showcase vehicle.

Kilgore currently represents an angel investor and executive in recovering his claims as minority shareholder.

We are excited to be in Austin and look forward to providing leverage to venture capital and other shareholders in Austin who wish to protect and recover their investments and contributing to the sophistication of the Austin legal and business communities.

Around 40 guests, including a number of bar, academic and industry leaders, joined us with their families at Lambert's Downtown Barbeque on May 13, 2010 to celebrate the occasion. Gary Clark, Jr., an award-winning songwriter and blues guitarist, provided the live entertainment.
